Stage Nine • English Vocabulary First Set

WHY THIS MATTERS

A genuine close-out does three things every time: names what was actually accomplished, connects it forward to what's next, and gives a specific, concrete action to take before the next session. For a vocabulary-dense stage like this one, the close-out is also where you reinforce the stage's central message — that active use, not passive recognition, is the actual goal.

Close-Out Scripts

SESSION 1

Closing Session 1

"Today covered ten vocabulary sets: adjectives, action verbs, transitions, academic phrases, workplace phrases, presentation words, networking words, polite expressions, idioms, and a reflection pulling it all together."

"The real test starting today isn't whether you can recognize these words on a list — it's whether you actually reach for them this week, in a real email or conversation."

"Before next time: bring a real email, report, or set of meeting notes you've written. We'll use your own writing as practice material."

SESSION 2

Closing Session 2

"Today was entirely written, formal vocabulary: email, reports, meeting documentation, decisions, and findings."

"Notice the common thread: precision protects you. A vague transition, an ambiguous decision statement, an overstated finding — each one causes real, avoidable confusion down the line."

"Before next time: know that we're moving to entirely spoken practice. Come ready to talk, in pairs and small groups, for most of the session."

SESSION 3

Closing Session 3

"That was a genuinely intensive, spoken session: meetings, negotiation, follow-up, feedback, questions, listening, and advanced feedback for harder conversations."

"If that felt like a lot of talking, that's exactly right — this is the most spoken-practice-heavy session in the entire stage, on purpose."

"Before next time: think of a short topic you could speak on with minimal prep. Next session, we build a full presentation's vocabulary around it."

SESSION 4

Closing Session 4

"Today you built a complete presentation's vocabulary: opening, structure, emphasis, engagement, handling questions, and a persuasive close."

"You should now be able to chain all six of today's lists into one coherent, confident talk — that's a genuinely significant skill beyond just knowing individual words."

"Before next time: nothing special required. Our next session is short and focused on first impressions."

SESSION 5

Closing Session 5

"A shorter session today, but a genuinely important one: the vocabulary of the very first moments of any professional interaction — greeting, introducing yourself, small talk, everyday expressions."

"First impressions happen fast, and now you have real, calibrated language for them, not just a single default phrase repeated regardless of context."

"Before next time: bring to mind a real, current challenge you'd be comfortable discussing at a high level. Our final session works through it."

SESSION 6

Closing Session 6 (Stage Close)

"That's Stage Nine, complete. Over six sessions and thirty-eight FIRSTS, you've built vocabulary for writing, speaking, presenting, introducing yourself, and working through real problems."

"Vocabulary that isn't used fades quickly. The real work now is bringing these words into your actual daily communication — not treating this as a completed unit to set aside."

"Before we close: name one specific word or phrase from anywhere in this stage that you genuinely know you'll keep using. Not the most impressive one — the one that's actually already started to feel natural."

"Stage Ten picks up with Relationships & Connections — much of the communication vocabulary from this stage becomes the actual language you'll use building those relationships."
